Peons and clerks on small pay could not otherwise be expected to go to the Pasteur Institute for treatment as the expenses incidental to such a long journey would be entirely beyond their means. In granting facilities to poor people to enable them to go to Kasauli, Government would appear to have been prompted to do so not only on considerations of humanity but also to popularize the Institution. To attain these objects it will, I consider, be desirable to bring Government servants on small pay within the scope of the order quoted above.

Sir,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Venkatavaradiengar's letter Pol No. 378, dated the 14th November 1905, regarding the arrangements proposed by the Durbar for sending poor persons bitten by rabid animals to the Pasteur Institute at Kasauli.

2. In reply, I am to explain that Mr. Williams in directing me to refer to the forthcoming Institute at Coonoor did not in any way contemplate that patients should have to wait until that Institute was actually ready for their reception. He merely thought that in the circumstances the arrangements proposed by the Durbar in connection with Kasauli were unnecessarily elaborate. The account adjustment involved by the Durbar's proposal is in itself not a simple one, and it seems hardly necessary to move Railway administrations for special concessions regarding through booking which can only be useful for a few months and which will probably be used very rarely.

3. In the circumstances I am to say that Mr. Fraser agrees that, should any case unfortunately occur in the short interval that will elapse before the Coonoor Institute is actually available, and which the Durbar may think it necessary to send to Kasauli for treatment, it will be far simpler for the Durbar to make the necessary arrangements for the journey direct with the patient. A regular system may if considered advisable be introduced later on in connection with the Coonoor Institute to which any patients from South India would naturally be sent.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,
